Far and wide,
"Golden Hair's" mother
Moaned and cried.

Mother Puss calmly Following slow, Listening,—calling Mech!—Mech!— Mother Puss found them, A little heap, Down in the deep grass Fast saleep.

MY BOY.

BY M. S. P.

They will crown thee with white lilies, They will bind them round thy brew; To thy noble, fearless spirit, All, in fear and love, shall bow. They will crown thee with white lilies,
Pure as thine own boyish heart;
Thou shalt ne'er know pain or sorrow,
Thou and they be afar apart.

They will corwn thee with the laurel, in the lofty paths of fame, Wisdom's seven pillared temple, Proudest, noblest be thy name; And the hearts of men shall tremble, As though pierced by sharpest lance, Whea thou read'st their hidden secrets With thy deep eye's searching glance.

They will place the classic bay-wreath
On thy noble brow, my boy;
Thou wilt move god-like among them,
Thou wilt be thy nation's joy;
And these tokens of thy victories,
Thou wilt bring them all to me,
And will, kneeling, say, "My mother,
I have won all these for thee."

But they crown him with the cypress, Laid the myrtle on his breast, And they shut him from the sunshine, Evermore to be at rest. But the music of his voice still room, and each donned a complete suit of armor. Then they armed them selves with broadswords, and in the still hours of the night went forth in search of defenceless citizens. Up and down the streets if grim array they marched, and whenever they found a man alone and unarmed, they would make him down on his knees and pray for mercy. Then, after having fright ened him almost out of his senses, they would permit him to go on his way. Their fun, however, after a while was brought to an abrupt termination by the police. Who marched them off to the Tombs. They entered fictitious names; but the judge next morning recognized the culprits, and discharged them with an admonition. On the same night they visited the house of Tom Jackson, who had just brought to this country the famous Swiss bell ringers. In response to their violent ringing of the bell, Jackson came to an upper window, and not knowing who his visitors were, asked them in tones of thunder what they wanted.

"We want an engagement," said Browne. "We are the original bell ringers."

Jackson then recognized them, and,

ringers."

Jackson then recognized them, and, appreciating the joke, invited them in.
